Stefan Gruenwedel is on vacation this month so we will miss our usual Gallery Tour. He'll be back next month, we hope with more new places for us to get our photography inspirations. Meanwhile, I'll just make this edition a four-pager.

The new print competition format went off pretty well, I think. It's still in its formative period and Mike Ferguson is definitely going to need some help with the paperwork. Still, involving the audience in the critiquing process made for lively discussion and a good learning experience for all.

Jim Goldstein has put his Alaskan experiences on line at his website: http://www.jmg-galleries.com/articles/ANWR_daily_highlights. Navigate to get to the various articles. And see this page and page 4 for tiny examples of his ANWR photography.

The Photochrome Yahoo Group is another way to keep current with Jim's adventures as he posts new activity to his website.

That group is a good way to keep current with lots of Photochrome activities between meetings (and newsletters.) It's easy to sign up.
